With years of experience in the technical and logistical aspects of event production, Andries was ready to leverage his skills and industry connections to build a company that reflected his passion for innovation, creativity, and excellence in event management.

Starting with only R350 for his first set of business cards, Andries bootstrapped the company from the ground up, relying on his deep industry knowledge and the relationships he had built over the years. His ability to establish partnerships with suppliers, venues, and other key stakeholders allowed 360 Vision Events to quickly gain a foothold in the highly competitive events industry. Andries's unique vision for the company focused on delivering personalized, high-quality events that not only met but exceeded client expectations.

Cutting-Edge Technology in Event Management

A major element of Andries's success as Head of Events Management lies in his forward-thinking approach to integrating cutting-edge technology into event management. He has consistently been an early adopter of new technologies that enhance both the efficiency of event planning and the quality of the attendee experience.

One of Andries's key innovations was the adoption of cloud-based platforms like Amazon Web Services (AWS) to manage event logistics. By utilizing scalable cloud solutions, 360 Vision Events was able to streamline operations, allowing for greater flexibility in event planning and execution. AWS provided a platform for managing everything from event registration and ticketing to real-time monitoring of event performance, enabling the company to handle large-scale events with ease.

In addition to cloud computing, Andries recognized the growing importance of virtual and hybrid events in the post-pandemic landscape. In response to the increasing demand for virtual event experiences, Andries integrated virtual event platforms into 360 Vision Events' offerings, allowing clients to host fully virtual or hybrid events that combined in-person and online elements. These platforms enabled live streaming, virtual networking, and real-time interaction between attendees, creating immersive and engaging event experiences despite the limitations of physical distance.

To enhance the attendee experience, Andries introduced AI-driven tools such as chatbots, which were designed to handle attendee inquiries and provide real-time updates during events. These AI tools helped streamline communication and improve the overall attendee experience by offering personalized support and recommendations. For example, at large conferences or corporate events, attendees could use the chatbot to ask questions about the schedule, locate specific booths or speakers, or receive personalized recommendations based on their interests.

In the realm of event analytics, Andries introduced data-driven solutions to monitor event performance in real-time, providing valuable insights that could be used to improve future events. By analyzing data such as attendee engagement, social media activity, and event feedback, 360 Vision Events and Maono Moja Events were able to continuously refine their event strategies and deliver increasingly high-quality experiences for their clients. This focus on data analytics has positioned Andries's companies as leaders in the use of technology to enhance both client satisfaction and operational efficiency.
